Get all the best moments in pop culture & entertainment delivered to your inbox. Picture: Photographer is my life./ Moment/Getty Images The world is a vast place. The planet weighs 13.1 pounds of seption and is nearly 25.0 miles away. The distance from the Arctic to Antarctica is more than 12.0 miles, and there are infinite natural, man-made treasures in between. There are about 200 million square miles to explore us and another 40 miles to the center of earth. With all that Earth to explore, it's safe to say that we've only explored about a quarter of the planet. In the small amount of land that we've explored, we've discovered decaying elements that would take billions of years to decompose, meaning they (and Earth) have been here for billions of years. We've found fossils of any kind of animal imaginable, and new species are always being discovered. We know that the planet has experienced climate change so severely that it has destroyed life, and it has understood the meteor strikes so massively, they destroyed life again. There was a time when many species of humans roamed the world, but we are the last species standing. The planet has an ambiguous history, but after all this death and destruction, we are left with beautiful terrain that is wounded by mountains, lakes, islands and valleys. What do you know about the planet? Take a look at this contest and see if you can pass some basic world trivia. Baby Boomers was still being born, Lucille Ball was taking the silver plate and international relations were as lying as ever. Like the Soviet Union, the British royal family changed hands. The wars would end, and the color TV would eventually sell for more than $1,000. This particular year of the 1950s saw no shortage of fun folk, fun TV and even more fun and creative food. It wasn't all serious peace talks and hydrogen bomb testing. How many examples do you need? We got you! You may be interested in know that Alan's team, Woody, was born out of the game itself this year. Do you know when Daley was born this year? Pierce Brosnan, who went on to play James Bond. While this may not seem interesting to himself, his birthday happened the same year the first James Bond book was published. What a fun coincidence! With all that said, it may seem that we gave a lot about this year, but there's so much more to know about pop culture and politics of the year. Can you pass this trivial 1953 race? Copyright © 2021 InfoSpace Holdings, LLC, a System1 Company Image: real444 / E+ / Getty Images Unknowingly and throughout our lives, we are filled with bits of trivial information that somehow stick in brains. During this race, we want to see how well you do in the basic trivia race. Maybe you think you deserve a place. Trivial local nights, but do you really? From geography to food to writers, there are certain things you just need to know without much thought. After all, pop culture brings the idea of knowing everything to our heads by its repetitive nature. Even when you're not paying attention, you're most likely learning a random reality or information tidbit. We simply wonder how much you have maintained over the years. To respond to our nagging curiosity, we designed a basic trivia contest that challenged its sense of trivia. While some of our answers may seem like given, others may require you to use our tips and to do a bit of thinking. Average intellect should not fight our questions at all, but are you above average? Leave what you think you know with this test, and we'll tell you where you stand. There's only one really basic way to find out - race on!
